

International: Teaching and Learning (HD) (20 wu)

(also part of the SU-University Didactics Program, module: basic workshop in higher education didactics competencies)

Target groups: especially international university teachers and scientists in the environment of the Saarland University

Content: The workshop “Teaching and Learning” enables interested international university teachers to reflect on their role as university teachers or university knowledge mediators and offers tips for dealing with different teaching situations at universities, which can also be transferred to other professional contexts of learning and teaching or knowledge transfer.

Workshop topics include:

Teaching-learning types and teaching-learning strategies, didactic principles, course planning, methods of knowledge transfer, activating and motivation, disruptions in teaching-learning contexts.

Using selected exercises, participants will learn how they can support and shape the learning process in courses. An exchange of experiences between the participants offers insights into the requirements and possibilities of teaching events in different subject areas and provides impulses for their own teaching activities, which of course also represents a competence for other professional contexts.

Single course, program, certificate: You can also attend the workshop as an individual seminar regardless of the subsequent certificate. For the full and dedicated attendance of an single course from 5 work units you will receive a competence-based proof of participation from the University Didactics Unit at Saarland University. This workshop is one of the workshops of the module “basic workshop in Higher Education Didactics Competencies” of the Saarland University’s Certificate of Teaching in Higher Education.

The certificate comprises a total of three modules (modules: basic workshops of higher education competencies, electives of higher education competencies, collegial coaching and teaching portfolio) at least 120 work units or at least 3x40 work units.

Lecturer/Speaker:

Birgit Roßmanith has headed the University Didactics Unit (udu) of the SU at ZeLL since 2008. She is an educational and social scientist and works as an academic developer, teacher, consultant, coach and scientist.
