

Learning and Teaching Basic Skills

(also part of the SU-Teaching Assistant and Learning Programme)

Target group: international students

Content: The range of scientific courses or continued education courses is increasingly moving in an international environment. Students from all over the world can learn, teach and interact with one another in face-to-face, hybrid and e-learning courses. In this workshop we would like to give international students the opportunity to reflect basic skills in learning and teaching tasks.

Speakers:

Johann F. Schneider is a social psychologist and former academic director of Psychology at Saarland University. Numerous international and English-speaking areas of responsibility and collaborations characterize his academic vita.

Birgit Roßmanith has headed the Division for University Didactics of the SU at Zell respectively the University Didactics of the Saarland University since 2008. She is an educational and social scientist and works as an academic developer, teacher, consultant, coach, researcher and author.

Programme and Certificate Responsible: Birgit Roßmanith

Registration and further information at:

<http://www.uni-saarland.de/hochschuldidaktik>