

5th Teachers' Day: Behaviour Rules?

Workshop Alice & Frank Spitz

Doing being British: an insight into contemporary British culture

The current English curriculum for secondary schools in the Saarland assigns considerable importance to intercultural learning. Among other things, pupils are supposed to

- get an insight into everyday life in English speaking countries
- get to know other cultural habits
- compare and contrast their own culture with other cultures

In this workshop we will have a look at a variety of written as well as audio-visual materials which give language students a window on contemporary British culture as well as an opportunity to compare and contrast their own lifestyles with those of their British counterparts. In particular we will make suggestions about how to exploit popular TV-series in class using pre-, while- and after-watching activities.
