A Science Slam is a unique format of scientific communication where researchers present their work in an entertaining and understandable way to a non-expert audience. Each slammer has ten minutes to showcase their own research, using any props and visual aids they like. The goal of a Science Slam is to make science accessible and engaging to a broader audience, to foster dialogue between scientists and society, and to showcase the diversity of research topics and methods across all fields of study.

EXPERT GROUP MEETINGS

09:00 PRESENTATION OF
T4EU MICRO-PROJECTS FROM
USAAR SEED FUNDING:

E1.5, CONFERENCE ROOM 002

Saarland University has established its own seed funding scheme that enables researchers to apply for funding for research activities involving at least one of the T4EU partner universities. The aim is to encourage research within the T4EU alliance and to foster networking. Projects in the scheme are often smaller-scale projects designed to encourage collaborative research interaction between partners, such conferences, articles for academic journals or networking events. To give you an idea of the range of projects being undertaken, some of the researchers who successfully applied for seed funding will present their results and talk about their experiences.

Dont forget to return your lanyard

As we want this event to be as sustainable as possible, please leave your lanyards in the room of your last meeting or deposit them in the designated return box when you leave. You'll find the box in the foyer of building E2.2 on the first two days of the event. Alternatively, you can drop your lanyard in the letterbox of the Welcome Center (building A4.4; the door next to the big 'owl window'), which is accessible at any time.
